

I fully support the proposed Sirius/XM merger. I believe there are ample alternate technologies already competing with satellite radio and these will continue to develop and offer alternative choices to the consumer. Moreover, other newly developed competing devices will continue be introduced to the market. Although we have satellite at home and in our car, we also use IPODs, DVDs, CDs, video games on the internet, and Cell Phone technology, as well as five home pc's/laptops, to access both entertainment and music.
